GLEAM® Learning Walks

Build your team's understanding of grade-level, engaging, affirming, and meaningful — GLEAM® — instruction and how to monitor and assess growth.

Ground Instructional Growth in Clear Data

Leaders of instructional change need tools to monitor and assess progress. During a GLEAM Learning Walk, our facilitators will work with you to define GLEAM, establish specific look-fors, and identify opportunities to grow.

We collaborate with you for two or three consecutive days to help your team build the knowledge and skills needed to incorporate grade-level, engaging, affirming, and meaningful — GLEAM — instruction in every classroom by rooting change in data.

During our time together, you and your team will:

- Engage in professional learning focused on building mindsets and instructional skill sets to implement GLEAM Instruction.
- Learn how to scale GLEAM Instruction through classroom observations using our Instruction Observation Tool.
- Develop an action plan based on trends and recommendations from the data collected during the visit.
- Receive a follow-up report sharing the data, trends, and recommendations from the visit.

What is GLEAM?

We root our GLEAM Learning Walks in the idea that all students should receive instruction that is grade-level, engaging, affirming, and meaningful. Evidence shows that grade-level rigor and standards are important, but they're not the only things that matter.

GRADE-LEVEL

Provide texts, tasks, and materials aligned to the appropriate college and career standards.

ENGAGING

Foster persistence in grade-level work that builds students' interests tied to knowledge and culture, helping them see themselves as learners with agency.

AFFIRMING

Honor all students and their varied experiences and backgrounds in the context of grade-level learning, creating a space where students feel safe, supported, and immersed in their learning.

MEANINGFUL

Understand and critique new and long-standing norms, stories, and ideas and examine their community's social position to foster a sense of advocacy and change.
